The Chicago Botanic Garden is a 385-acre facility owned by the Cook County Forest Preserve located in the village of Glencoe, Illinois and operated by the Chicago Horticultural Society. The Chicago Botanic Garden secured the services of Project Management Advisors, Inc. to oversee and manage three diverse capital improvement projects. The projects include the retrofit of an existing office into a biology research laboratory, the redesign of the Dundee Road entrance to introduce vehicular access control and the directional bore replacement of the force main sewer line.
